

We are proud to source our wines from the Alliance wine company and would like to introduce you to the people and the philosophy behind the wines you are about to sample.

The roots of Alliance go back to 1984, when Jonathan Kennet and Christian Bouteiller saw an opportunity to service the Scottish corporate and on-trade market with premium, mainly French wines. The business was a success and slowly, but surely, Alliance evolved into one of the leading players in the Scottish market. The company's portfolio has moved on from predominantly French to more New World wines, importing now from 16 different countries, with particular focus in Spain and Australia. The company is now the largest independent Scottish wine business.

We believe that wine is much more than just a commodity - it is about the people who grow the grapes and their winemaking philosophies. Our producers are small, independent, family-run wineries, where wine is a way of life. Wine is made to be enjoyed and we are here to help provide part of that enjoyment.
